THEMES AND VARIATIONS
By President Lee H. Bristol, Jr.

Alumni are pace-setters in leadership, for they relate the College to the institutions and people of their communities. They recruit top-notch, talented young people who truly "belong" at Westminster; they help fellow alumni to find better jobs in churches, schools, and colleges; they act as liaison officers between the College and clergy, educators, and institutional executives.

A college is made up of countless transient elements. Students, faculty, even presidents come and go. Buildings or whole campuses can be changed or replaced. The one continuing, stabilizing force can be a college's alumni body. The interest, prayers, and support of devoted alumni can be a college's greatest asset.

Even someday, when Westminster is no longer a struggling young college fighting for financial security, regional accreditation, and other well-deserved recognitions, our alumni will continue to be our greatest asset.

Elsewhere in this issue, the Chairman of the Board, Dr. Kenneth Chorley, has paid tribute to Westminster alumni and the many (not just financial) ways in which they contribute to the strength of the College. As he sums it up, "The survival of the College depends on alumni."

Westminster is proud of its alumni and grateful for their interest, prayers and support — especially at this critical point in the College's history.

In forty years Westminster alumni have helped immeasurably to make our once small parish music school a world-famous "little college with the big sound."

THE ALUMNI LUNCHEON

At 12:15 p.m. on Saturday, July 10th, about 75 alumni gathered in the Westminster Commons for a luncheon honoring Dr. Alexander McCurdy and Mr. John T. Clough who retired after years of distinguished service to the college.

John Clough has served as Director of Alumni Affairs and Placement since 1957, and Dr. McCurdy has served as Head of the Organ Department for the past 25 years.

Dr. Marvin E. Reecher ('38), President of the Alumni Association greeted the Alumni and recognized the classes year by year. Dr. Rhea B. Williamson struck a somber note when she reminded those present that "you are the school, and the future of Westminster is in your hands."

Miss Lois Laverty ('51-'55) sang two Schubert songs: Heidenroslein and Du Bist die Ruh.

President Lee H. Bristol, Jr., praised the outstanding successes of the touring Westminster Choir and the Symphonic Choir in their many performances with major orchestras this past year. He announced appointments for the new academic year and pointed with pride to the standards of faculty and students and to the near-record enrollment anticipated for 1965-1966.

The following people were cited for their distinguished work in the field:

- John Davis ('47) Organist and Director of the West Point Chapel Choir. Past Chairman of the Board.
- Charles L. D. Higgins ('35), Trustee of the College, now vocal teacher in the Princeton, N. J. School System. Mr. Higgins was instrumental in bringing the New Jersey State Junior High School Choral Festival to the Westminster Campus. He is a frequent guest conductor at high school choral festivals.
- Dr. George Lynn ('38) Music Director and Head of Voice and Conducting Departments at Westminster Choir College.
- Cecil T. Stewart ('33) Head of Music Department of Mount Union College, Alliance, Ohio and currently planning a European tour with his choir.
- Virginia Maxwell Switten ('45) told of Mr. Clough's achievements, including his 28 years as Minister of Music at the First Baptist Church of Syracuse and his outstanding work with his award winning American Legion Chorus. For his devoted work at Westminster during the past eight years, Mr. Clough was presented with a bronze plaque.
- John Davis expressed the sentiments of many a former student as he lauded the unique and challenging quality of Dr. McCurdy's teaching. Although Dr. McCurdy was not there to respond in person, he later acknowledged his Alumni citation, saying, "The Plaque is here! I am so pleased with it. In fact, I am touched beyond words."

The occasion ended with the singing of the Lutkin Benediction conducted by James C. McKeever ('48), new Director of Church Relations and Alumni Affairs.

POPULATION EXPLOSION AT WESTMINSTER
The admission of ninety freshmen and nineteen transfer students in September brought the student population to a high figure of 306. Twenty-six students are commuting, but the 283 campus residents have put some strain on dormitory facilities.

CARLA GARRISON BUNTING '46, Westminster's Admission Counselor, will be sending alumni attractive new posters advertising three awards for freshmen entering in the fall of '66. They are the Arthur Judson Award of $400 for pianists, The Johnson-McCurdy Award of $500 for voice majors and a similar award for organ majors. We are counting on alumni to keep up their good record of recruiting the best prospects from their areas.

FROM THE ALUMNI DIRECTOR
Fellow Alumni:
We made it — not only the budget, but our first issue of the Alumni News for 1965-66 is on time. I hope you like it. Putting this material together is a big job, and we are indebted to Dr. D. Lincoln Harter, Administrative Assistant to the President, for his help.

Heartfelt thanks for the many, many personal expressions of good wishes to me since assuming the post of Director of Alumni Affairs! Your kind words are much appreciated.

The balloting was great — heavy participation and very close. Many thanks to all who accepted nomination and congratulations to those who won!

On campus the 1965-66 year — our fortieth — is off to a great start. Enrollment promises to be over three hundred. Westminster Choir is sounding great under the direction of Dr. George Lynn, and a good spirit prevails.

As President Bristol put it, we have strengthened our faculty; the curriculum is improved; our Board of Trustees is stronger; we are raising a reduced budget; excellent concert exposures are scheduled including one at Town Hall in the Spring; and we are getting all set for the Middle States Association visit in November.

By the time this is read, our Executive Committee will have met and much business will have transpired. I think we will have some really exciting news and no doubt some opportunities to report to you in the next issue.

Meanwhile, keep me posted on your personal news, address changes, etc. and we'll see you in November.

PRESIDENT BRISTOL'S CONCLUDING REMARKS
At Opening Convocation, Sept. 20, 1965

What does the beginning of a new academic year mean to you? Does it mean "Here we go again, round in the same old circles like an LP record that's been put on 'repeat'? Does it mean just nine more months of learning new pieces, singing in a choir, and attending classes, or does the start of a new year mean to you another opportunity to approach your true potential both as a well-rounded musician and as a person?

To those of you who share this latter view I suggest that getting the most mileage out of a year demands a lot of looking— inward, outward, and upward.

First of all, it seems to me we will do well to remind ourselves to look within, to take stock of ourselves and how well we are keeping on the track. As the Greeks put it: "Know thyself:"

FIVE BRITISH ELECTED HONORARY FELLOWS

Oh, I’m aware it’s not easy. We are surrounded by so many distractions—classes and rehearsals, work to do, neighbors practicing, jets overhead—that it’s not easy to shut them all out, withdraw for a few moments at the close of the day to take stock of ourselves and look within. But isn’t it a kind of insurance policy against later regret for us regularly to examine the use we make each day of opportunities, opportunities that will never again be offered to us in quite the same way? Isn’t it from just such regular self-examination that you and I progress best toward self-knowledge?

Dag Hammarskjold wrote that he felt the longest journey one ever makes is the journey inwards, looking within ourselves, but such a journey is certainly the point at which we want to begin.

The second kind of looking we may wish to consider is our need to look out—out beyond the limits of Hamilton Avenue and Walnut Lane to the larger world of which this campus is a small part.

It is all too easy, I know, for us to lose ourselves so completely in our campus life and work that we forget to look out at the world of Viet Nam, Gemini flights, race riots, even Beatles and Bubble gum. And yet the world out there is the same world into which we were born and the same world to which we want to minister through our music. To prepare for that ministry we want to learn about it through our general studies courses, assemblies, extra-curricular activities; and we want to learn about it, as I see it, through association not just with congenial souls who share our same interests, but with “all sorts and conditions of men.”

We want certainly to look within. We want to look out at the world beyond our little campus. But there is still a third kind of looking I think we need to do—the most important looking of all.

Last month in England, when I visited the parish church in Stratford-on-Avon where Shakespeare is buried, we entered the Church and were handed a sheet of paper which said: “We ask you as you walk round, please to remember that you are on holy ground, to behave reverently, to restrain your speaking... and, if you wish to see the glory of this church, Do not forget to look up.”

The pamphlet referred specifically to the beautiful ceiling of the Church, but I took it as a reminder of that third kind of looking I think all of us would do well to remember.

In the confusion of our rushing about there will come times when life doesn’t make much sense, when it all seems fragmented and not made of one piece. It is at such moments as these that the Christian wants to look upward to the One who alone can take the bits and pieces of our lives and return them to us in a way that does make sense and that clearly shows these fragments have been cut from the same cloth after all.

“Blessed are the single-hearted, for they shall know much peace,” said Thomas à Kempis. “I am the Way,” said Christ, and it was He who came to reveal how God could stoop “down to show us enough of Himself to live by.”

In the months to come here’s hoping all of us will do a lot of looking—within, without, and above all upward, for I am persuaded that if we do, this year can become a turning point for us all.

CHAIRMAN CHORLEY

CHALLENGES

ALUMNI

Dr. Kenneth Chorley, Chairman of The Board of Trustees, Westminster Choir College, addressed the alumni on Saturday, July 10, 1965, at their annual meeting on campus. The following are some especially memorable excerpts:

Since I only have ten minutes to talk with you, I want to talk about "survival"—survival of your alma mater.

No educational institution worthy of its name receives sufficient income from its students to pay all the operating expenses of the institution. For instance, the students at Westminster Choir College pay only about 70 per cent of the cost of their education. This leaves Westminster with an annual operating deficit somewhere in the neighborhood of $150,000.

First, let me say that I did not become Chairman of the Board of Trustees of the Westminster Choir College, to paraphrase the late Sir Winston Churchill's remarks, "in order to preside over the liquidation of this institution."

In the past fiscal year, the alumni of Westminster contributed a little over $15,000 to the College. This is a long way from meeting the annual operating deficit of $150,000. On the first of May this year, two months short of the end of the fiscal year, Westminster Choir College needed $100,000 to pay its bills. The Board of Trustees took off their coats and went to work. We raised not just $100,000 but $118,000, and Westminster Choir College rests in the hands of its alumni. Suppose Westminster with an annual operating deficit somewhere in the neighborhood of $150,000.

If you accept this challenge, and if 900 people, only 50 per cent of the graduates of this institution, accept this challenge, Westminster Choir College will move on to heights of which all of us will be proud. Then, you, the alumni, can raise your heads and look to the stars and say, "I am a graduate of this great institution."
